Terry,

The City does not have an environmental compliance officer. However, our code enforcement officer, Janet Lunceford, works closely with the Kitsap County Health District regarding environmental issues. Janet went with some Health District employees to observe the tanks. There did not appear to be any asbestos in the tanks. The Health District employees intend to return to the site to test for petroleum in the tanks. I hope to have additional information for you next week.

Mark,

Does the city have an environmental compliance officer who could check to make sure there are no petroleum products or asbestos in the tanks on the Sesko property? As the intended use for the tanks is floatation for submarine retrieval, DNR does not believe there is any reason to think such contaminants would be on board. Nonetheless, if DNR can get some assurance that the tanks appear clean, it may make it easier to find a taker for scrapping the tanks.
